JSE LISTS MINI FTSE/JSE ALSI TOP 40 FUTURES CONTRACT FOR RETAIL INVESTORS

JOHANNESBURG, 3 JUNE 2008. Today, the JSE listed a MINI FTSE/JSE Top 40 futures contract which now allows retail investors to invest in a future or option on the future on the ALSI Top 40 Index. This contract will be known as the ALMI.

“The existing ALSI Top 40 futures contract is valued at approximately R300 000, which is out of reach to many retail investors because their rand exposure would be too high,” explains Allan Thomson, Head of Trading at the JSE. “Now, with the listing of the Mini ALSI Top 40 futures contract, the contract size is 100\textsuperscript{th} of the size of the current ALSI Top 40 futures contract which means that the investor can get the same exposure to the ALSI Top 40 but at approximately R3 000 exposure per contract.”

According to Thomson, the development and subsequent listing of the Mini ALSI Top 40 contract came about due to increasing pressure from retail investors via their brokers to be able to obtain a future or option on the ALSI Top 40 without the large exposure.

And that demand is evident on day one already. Since listing this morning at 8h30, over R525 000 in traded value had gone through the Exchange by 12h00 already.

The Mini ALSI contract is in line with international trends that has seen the successful launch of the mini-contracts such as the Mini S&P 500, the Mini Nasdaq 100 and the Mini FTSE 100.

“As we’ve seen with the successful launch of other derivative products on our markets, such as Single Stock Futures and Currency Futures, as a result of investor demand, we anticipate that the mini-ALSI Top 40 contract will follow in much the same vein,” concludes Thomson.
