Introduction and definitions

Introduction and definitions

1. A Listed company is a company which is listed on the JSE
2. A Listed company website is a website that is owned by the listed company or branded with the listed company name and trademark(s) and can either be a website that is open to the public (internet), a website that is restricted to a closed user group (extranet) or a website that is totally restricted to internal employees (intranet)

Introduction and definitions

3. The listed company investor relations (IR) website licence allows a contracted user, any group company or authorised client which is a listed company to display a combination of its share price/s, including any instrument issued for, or listed by the listed company, (delayed by 15 minutes), certain value-add end of day data and delayed SENS data, specific to the listed company, on a company website
 - i. The relevant listed company IR licence fee (Mainboard or AltX) as set out in the price list is applicable
 - iii. The relevant listed company IR licence fee (Mainboard or AltX) as set out in the price list is applicable

Conditions

Conditions

1. The listed company investor relations (IR) website licence fee is applicable for each separate company website, so a contracted user must pay a separate licence fee for each listed company website of either itself, group company or authorised client that displays the data referred to in this Policy

Conditions

2. Notwithstanding any contrary provision in the data agreement, no licence fee is payable if the listed company displays the end of day share price/s for the listed company, including any instrument issued for or listed by the listed company, on its intranet, internet and/or extranet websites

Conditions

3. Notwithstanding any contrary provision in the data agreement, no licence fee will be payable if the listed company displays the delayed share price/s, for the listed company, including any instrument issued for or listed by the listed company, on its intranet website only

Conditions

4. A listed company that has a “mobi/WAP” site in addition to its internet website, will incur no additional licence fee/s for the “mobi/WAP” site, provided that:
 - i. The data being displayed on the "mobi/WAP" site falls within the data authorised under the relevant licence.
 - ii. The data being displayed on the "mobi/WAP" site is only an extract of the full information displayed on the Internet website.
 - iii. The internet website is reported to the JSE and the relevant licence fee is paid

Were the Listed Company provides any Data outside of the allowable data covered by the above licences, the Listed Company will be liable for the applicable data distribution fees.
